The James Braid designed North Shore Golf Course was founded in 1910 and offers a mix of both links and parkland golf with a beautiful location alongside the North Sea. The course has its own 3 AA star 34 room hotel set within the grounds.

If ever there was a golf course in England that deserves more attention than it currently receives then Seacroft Golf Club is it. Currently ranked as the 2nd best course in Lincolnshire, Seacroft was founded in 1895 and was originally a quaint little 9 hole venue. In 1900 it was expanded to 18 holes under the watchful eye of designer and former Open Champion, Willie Fernie. In 1911 and 1923 there were major alterations but more than half the present holes are as Fernie designed them. The two nines occupying distinct levels with a central ridge of dunes dividing one from the other. Adaptation to the modern game has not spoiled the gloriously old fashioned feel of the golf course with tight undulating and hogsback fairways and a number of blind shots, 75 bunkers and glorious views over the nature reserve, the Wash and the Norfolk coastline from various holes.

The course at North Shore, which was modelled by James Braid, is overlooked by the hotel. Braid is regarded as a world wide course creator and was at the forefront of course architects in the early 1900s. His challenge was to transform a unique blend of exposed coastline and lush parkland into a course that would challenge every club in the bag.

Like all good links designers, Braid made use of the strong easterly wind which can cause even the best players a headache. The wind hits your drive on 5, 10, and 15 from the right and on the 13 and 17 head on. With a strong wind behind you on 11 and 14 it makes club selection a nightmare -but it's true golf in every sense. Braid has given many a golfer a lot to shout and laugh about when reaching the club bar.

Drummond Road, Seacroft, Skegness, Lincolnshire, PE25 3AU

Originally founded in 1895, Seacroft is one of the very best seaside links on the East coast. "It is one of those courses that runs, roughly speaking, straight out and home," wrote Bernard Darwin in The Golf Courses of the British Isles. "And the nine holes that we play with the wind in our face we think really beautiful, while with the wind behind us we are just a little disappointed... it must often happen that the wind is neither for us nor against us, but blows straight across the course. Then the golf must be really difficult, for the fairway is uniformly narrow and the rough wonderfully tenacious."

Seacroft is known as a hidden gem among the top courses of Great Britain and Ireland. It is a traditional links course tucked away on the Lincolnshire coast at the south end of Skegness. Because of its situation on the coast and its fast draining soil the full course with normal tees and greens is virtually certain to be open.

It's a classic out-and-back course with just the right mix of rugged duneland and quirky, humpty-dumpty terrain. It creates a blend of unique links golf that is both testing and immensely enjoyable.
